

SEEKS TO DISBAR W. P. DOYLE

GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE OF BAR ASSOCIATION PRESENTS HIM

For What He Says Was an Inadvertent Original Complaint Was a Woman's Stevedore Whose Bill of Fare He Swore He Had Paid Before He Paid It.

Because he signed an affidavit that he had paid a stevedore's bill of $25 when he hadn't the Bar Association has brought disbarment proceedings against Matthew P. Doyle, a lawyer at 87 Nassau street, who submits letters from five Supreme Court Justices and a dozen lawyers saying that they know Doyle would not be guilty of a dishonest act.

Doyle says in an affidavit that he was counsel for Sam Morganster, who was sued for damages for personal injuries he brought against Emma Mayer, the landlady, and Nathan Kaminsky, the lessee, of the property at 110 Madison street. She got a judgment against Kaminsky by default, and on November 18 last Kaminsky moved in the City Court for an order to show cause why he shouldn't be permitted to put in an answer alleging that he was never served in the case. This motion was denied and later on the same affidavit of non-service City Court Judge Conlon appointed Santiago P. Cahill referee to take testimony as to the service.

The lawyer says that at the hearing before the referee the only evidence presented by the defendant was that he always went to a synagogue late in the afternoon and couldn't have been served with the court order at 6 o'clock in the evening.

The referee notified the lawyer on December 19 that his report was ready and that he had found that Kaminsky was served. The referee stated that his charge was $60 and the stenographer's fee $25 and asked Doyle to send two checks. Doyle regarded the stenographer's charge as excessive and upon paying the referee said he was going around to the office of the stenographer, Frances Marion Brandon, to ask her to reduce it. The referee then turned over the report, and on December 22 Doyle moved in the City Court to have the referee's report confirmed and the charges for the hearings assessed against Kaminsky, at the same time filing an affidavit that he had paid the costs.

Doyle said he inadvertently used the words "fees paid" in connection with the stenographer's fee when he should have said "fees incurred." Doyle said the mistake arose through his haste to get the report confirmed and served on Kaminsky.

The lawyer said this haste was due to the fact that he intended to collect the amount of the judgment out of $700 that Kaminsky had on deposit with the landlady for security for the rents and also out of the rents due. He was restrained from collecting while the referee's hearings were on and was afraid that before he was free to act the landlady and tenant would act collectively and that the landlady would not only take the $700 for non-payment of rent but would also disburse the money for the lease would be of no benefit to Doyle.

The lawyer says this is exactly what happened, and it occurred before the report was confirmed. He declared that he went to see the stenographer the day he told the referee he was going to, but it was Saturday afternoon and she wasn't there. He concluded to see that the entire amount was paid, he said, but thought it should be paid by the defendant Kaminsky.

Doyle said that after he found that he couldn't collect anything he asked Judge Conlon to let the Kaminsky for contempt for swearing falsely that he hadn't been served and referred Judge Conlon to the decision of Judge Green in the case of the Dollard against Korosky, in which Korosky was fined $1,800, the amount of the costs to carry the case through the City, State and Federal courts. He says that Judge Conlon promised to act as soon as the Korosky decision was affirmed by the Appellate Division, where it is now.

The lawyer declares that he told the stenographer that if he couldn't make Kaminsky pay the costs he would pay the money out of his own pocket and collect from his client as soon as she was able to get out of bed and earn the money. He understood that the stenographer was satisfied with this arrangement.

The stenographer brought charges against Doyle before the Bar Association in February, stating the fact that Doyle had made the false affidavit of payment, whereas she got nothing.

The grievance committee of the Bar Association reported to the Appellate Division the facts of the case, and Doyle is guilty of unprofessional conduct, malpractice and deceit, and the higher court has sent the proceedings to a referee.

Doyle says in his affidavit to the Bar Association that he was long a clerk in the office of Stephen A. Walker, the former United States District Attorney, and that he was charged before with wrongdoing either in or out of his profession.

"My reputation in my profession and in society is of the best," says Doyle, "and my acquaintance in and out of the profession is of a high order. I can truthfully say that I am liked with rare if any exception by every one of my acquaintances, and I feel much chagrined that the gentlemen (the grievance committee) hesitated to take my word and resorted to such drastic measures as to prefer charges without first making an investigation of my conduct."

Doyle says he told the grievance committee that if they thought that he ought to pay the stenographer's bill he would do so, but said that the charges be dismissed. He tells the Appellate Division that he understands that this offense the grievance committee, but he assures the Appellate Division that he meant no offense.

The bill has since been paid by Doyle.

COMPLAINANT NOW ACCUSED

Charges to the Bar Association Recast Upon Lawyer That Made Them.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has dismissed disbarment proceedings brought against William L. Ball, a lawyer of 9 Rector street, by Maurice B. Gluck, a lawyer of 170 Broadway, and has sent to a referee charges brought against Gluck himself by the Bar Association arising out of the transaction of which Gluck complained. Gluck, who besides being a lawyer is president of the Woolf Institute Company of New Jersey, accused Ball of malpractice and gross unprofessional conduct in that he attempted extortion against the Woolf Institute Company and committed a misdemeanor by demanding back on behalf of Woolf, the patents, certain patents and patent rights and threatening Woolf with disbarment and arrest unless he surrendered them.

Ball rejoined that being retained by Woolf he had concluded that the license to use Woolf's patents in New Jersey had been obtained without consideration and that the incorporation of Gluck's concern was probably irregular. He went to Gluck to induce him to give up the contract and Gluck replied that he would resist any effort to deprive him of his share of Woolf's property under the contract.

Thereafter Woolf preferred charges against Gluck to the Bar Association, and after a hearing on them the grievance committee found Gluck guilty of fraud, deceit, malpractice and gross unprofessional conduct.

The grievance committee also reports that Gluck has been practicing law under the firm name of Gluck, Alden & Gray.

MET ROOSEVELT IN JUNGLE

DR. GUITERAS SAYS THERE'LL BE LESS TUMBO AT THE FINISH.

Lost 30 Pounds Himself Doing Similar Shooting Stunts—Water and Chiggers the Dangers, Not Lions—The Lions Run—Native Wouldn't Boil Water.

Dr. Ramon Guiteras returned yesterday by the American liner Philadelphia from his first long vacation in three years. He spent most of his time across seas in the Mombasa territory where Col. Roosevelt is hunting jungle creatures. As Col. Roosevelt entered the jungle the doctor emerged, and a snapshot photographer caught them shaking hands as fellow graduates of Harvard and experts with the rifle.

Prof. Guiteras, who is a bit more than six feet tall, weighed 200 pounds when he went in from home, rhinoceros and lion. He is now a slender man, and the heads of twelve varieties of wild beasts which are on the way here in preservatives he weighed 180 pounds. He said that Col. Roosevelt remarked after looking him over: "I'd like to have your weight." The doctor responded that the Colonel would doubtless be twenty-five pounds lighter after he had gone through the jungle. Then they laughed and the Colonel said he hoped so. The impression of the doctor is that the Colonel will drop at least twenty-five pounds before he comes out into civilization.

There was little to fear from wild beasts, particularly the lion, in the jungle, said Dr. Guiteras. All the lions the doctor ever chased on horseback wanted to get away. A wounded lion would fight, but a lion that wasn't hurt would keep on going until it was exhausted. The chief things to fear in the jungle were water and chiggers, or chigoes. You might get diseased through the water and be crippled by the burrowing of the chiggers under the toenails. By boiling the water Dr. Guiteras avoided fevers and by avoiding old camps he dodged the chiggers. The chiggers prefer the native to the stranger within the jungle and cripple all that they seek to devour.

The native is not friendly to cooked water. The particular native who was intruded upon by the doctor and his comrades thought the idea was ridiculous and decided that he would simply say the water was bad and go on his way.

The doctor knew boiled water from unboiled and caught the disingenuous native's first squirt out of the cooler. The native confessed that he had not waited for the water to boil, but it was merely an accidental superstition. Later the native died of a fever brought on by drinking unboiled water.

The doctor hired an East Indian for a certain number of rupees to supervise personally the boiling of the water. The East Indian was faithful, particularly after he had been invited to look at a revolver which he was not allowed to go off if the water was not boiled according to specifications.

It is the impression of Dr. Guiteras that Col. Roosevelt and his party will bring out of the jungle a very fine, perhaps an unexampled, collection of specimens for the Smithsonian.

Other passengers by the Philadelphia were Col. and Mrs. W. B. Haldeman, bringing the body of their daughter, who died in Paris after an operation for appendicitis; A. A. Ade, Assistant Secretary of State, who has been bicycling in Europe, covering about 1,700 miles since he arrived in France in April; Leslie M. Shaw and Major T. H. Low of the Marine Corps.

THE NEWSIES OWN CAMP.

A Recreation Spot for the Youngsters Who Hand Out the Paper You Want.

Down at Woodlawn Beach in Staten Island about 200 youngsters are enjoying themselves each week rolling around in the sand, kicking about in the water, playing baseball and amusing themselves in the variety of ways that suggest themselves to a healthy boy. They're all members of the Newsies' Home Club and the summer camp is the newest benefit of the organization.

Jack Sullivan, a newsboy himself, started the club a few years ago to provide a place where the boys might be amused and kept off the streets and out of mischief in after business hours. It was a plan that won the approval of many prominent folks in this town and they gave money as well as approbation. A clubhouse on the East Side near the Bowers was fitted up, a gymnasium was equipped, and so many took advantage of the place that the officers of the home club decided to build a new one. Those interested in its welfare discovered that it was doing a lot of good, and when the summer camp was proposed, the boys found support. Mr. E. Putnam gave a good sized tract of land at Woodlawn Park and subscriptions brought enough money to carry the scheme through.

Newsboys, like everybody else, are not harmed by a vacation, and now once a week or oftener a bunch of them are shipped down to the salt water to have a good time. The officers of the home club, Joseph E. Smith, president, 32 Broadway; Rollin Morgan, vice-president, 36 Park row; William Shillaber, Jr., secretary, 1 Broadway; William Randolph Hearst, treasurer, 228 William street; Jack Sullivan, founder and manager, 74 East Fourth street; Richard S. Crumley, superintendent, 333 Broadway; Morgan, Henry and Hearst are co-directors. The members, S. P. Booth, D. W. Quinn and Jason Rogers, all connected with newspapers.

Among those who have subscribed to keep the home and camp going are Cornelius N. Bliss, Senator McCarran, Senator Dewey, J. Pierpont Morgan, Timothy D. Sullivan, Charles A. Moore, John Hays Hammond, Judge E. H. Gary, Edwin Gould, James R. Keene and many other prominent firms and individuals. Money is still needed, however. It may be sent to Treasurer Hearst at 228 William street.

To Remove Sherry's Outdoor Dining Plaza

Plans have been filed for removing the outdoor dining garden and plaza of Sherry's at the southwest corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-fourth street to make way for the widening of the avenue by the city. The ornamental pediment with its half dozen decorative pedestals and lamp standards will be removed, the curb line moved in seven and a half feet nearer the building line and new vaults with patent light installed. The improvements are to cost $6,000.

IN SOCIETY.

The course of June weddings has been interrupted by the heat wave and yesterday there were three celebrated in the chantry of Grace Church. At Stockbridge, Mass., the couple and their attendants being all New Yorkers, for which 8,000 cards have been issued. The interesting nuptials of the last week were those of the cousins and heiresses the Misses Mary Astor Paul and Frances Fell, now Mrs. Charles A. Munn and Mrs. Antonio Devereux, whose weddings occurred at country places near Philadelphia on Monday and Wednesday. Both couples, who will marry abroad, are now on the Atlantic, and they will doubtless receive a deal of social attention while in London.

Miss Marion Lawson, whose wedding with James Fuller Lord is to take place next Wednesday, June 30, at Dreamwood, the country place of her father, Thomas W. Lawson, near Boston, will be one of the loveliest of the June brides. She is a tall, slender girl and extremely pretty, and noted as a dancer and expert whip. Yellow is her favorite color and will of course be worn at the wedding. Since the demise of her mother Miss Lawson has been at the head of the household. Mrs. Maud Howe Elliott, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who had the Misses Lawson under her care in Europe for a year or more, will be at the wedding, being now over here. Mr. Lord, who is a wealthy lumber merchant, belongs to the leading Chicago clubs. He is a graduate of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy.

Baron and Baroness Ludwig de Laval-Kistelek have been in town for some days. The Marquis de Mores was one of the guests at a dinner given by John J. Sinclair at the Plaza on Tuesday night. Baron J. de Montesquieu and Count Culo Martelli left for France on Thursday. The Marquis de Chateaufort-Prairie, who has been here for the last week, is the one of his name married a number of years ago here to Miss Coudert, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coudert, in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Countess de Kistelek came over several days ago to join her husband, Charles Coudert, a member of a rich Peruvian family. Count Guillaume de Ganay of Paris is expected here next week. The Marquis de Laval-Kistelek, Premier of Newfoundland, is the guest for the week end of British Ambassador Bryce and Mrs. Bryce at North Harbor, Me.

The wedding of Miss Helen Murray Peabody and Pennington Satterthwaite will take place to-morrow at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Arthur J. Peabody, 15 West Tenth street. The drawing rooms will be decorated with palms, roses and peonies and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks, rector of Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church. The bride will be given in marriage by her brother, the Rev. Dr. Peabody. There will be no bridesmaids or ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Allen Townsend and the Misses Townsend left for Europe next Wednesday, and will make an automobile tour in England and Scotland. They will be at Ardley in the autumn. Miss Viola Townsend is to make her social debut next winter at a ball to be given at the Colony Club. Mr. and Mrs. P. de Zeldow, of Moscow, and the Countess de Lusia, who will be abroad several months.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris left town a few days ago for their place at Bar Harbor. Mr. and Mrs. William Douglas Sloane, who arrived from Europe during the week, will pass the summer at Elm Court, their place at Lenox, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Boardman, who was Miss Dorothy Raymond, now on their honeymoon jaunt, will live here in the autumn.

William Hall Penfold has gone to the Restigouche Club in Canada for the salmon fishing. Robert Golet is also at this resort. George F. Baker, Jr., there of late, will return on July 10. John S. Kennedy of West Fifty-seventh street is now on his annual salmon fishing trip in Canada.

A very big wedding of the week will be that of Miss Susan Ridley Sedgwick and Dr. Arthur W. Swann, to take place in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, roses and peonies and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Arthur Lawrence will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody of Groton, Mass.

Among the newly wedded who departed for Europe during the week were Mr. and Mrs. John Moore Dickinson, who was Miss Elizabeth B. Sands, who left yesterday on the Arabic and will be away until the autumn. On Tuesday Mrs. Philip Sands, the bride's mother, and her sister, Miss Anna A. Sands, left for Europe on the Adriatic and will summer abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont have been giving elaborate dinners of late in Paris. They plan to be in England for some time.

before they return to this side. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont has deferred her departure for Newport until Wednesday.

Count and Countess Laszlo Széchenyi, who was Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, are in London, where other members of the latter's family are now located. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney are entertaining American friends at the fine place they have taken at Windsor and Mrs. Whitney has appeared in some gorgeous costumes at Ascot and other festive places.

Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim will be one of the charming divorcees of the Newport cottage set this summer and will have a fine collection of French finery to vie with that of other prominent matrons. She will occupy the cottage of Ambassador Henry White and Mrs. White on Harrison avenue, which has been rented for many seasons. Neither of Mrs. White's brothers has been to the resort for a long time.

Mrs. William Fitzhugh Whitehouse has been at her Newport place for the last two or three weeks with some members of her family. On Wednesday she went to Mount Kisco, where she will remain with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whitehouse, at their country place until she sails for Europe next Tuesday. They will go on to their camp, Pine Free Point, Adirondacks. Mrs. Vanderbilt will return here late in August. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is now expected home and will go on at once to Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt gave a dinner of twenty covers at Sandy Point, their place near Newport, last Sunday night. They will give a big dinner dance there next Saturday night and will entertain many guests over the holidays. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, who have been abroad for the last few months, are expected to arrive here next Tuesday. They will go on to their camp, Pine Free Point, Adirondacks. Mrs. Vanderbilt will return here late in August. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is now expected home and will go on at once to Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munn, who was Miss Mary Astor Paul, came on here after the bridal breakfast which followed their marriage last Monday in St. Martin's Church, Radnor, Pa., and stopped at the Hotel de Ville. On Wednesday they left for Europe, where they will travel until the early autumn. They will then take a house in Boston, as Mr. Munn has still to complete his term at Harvard University. After he is graduated they will decide on their future home, and as the bride is rich can follow her fancies.

Lady Herbert arrived from England on Tuesday and will pass some time with her father, R. T. Wilson, at his cottage at Newport. Her sister, Mrs. Ogden Golet, who awaited her arrival to leave, went abroad on the following day. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Golet will soon go to Europe, where they will pass the summer. Mr. Golet has been of late in Canada. Mrs. Ogden Golet is in Europe and Mrs. Orme Wilson is en route. Neither will be absent long, as the father, Mr. Wilson, who has capable nurses with him, is extremely feeble.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish were among the guests of the Frederick Townsend Martin at some of his recent affairs in Paris. Before arriving there they had made an automobile tour in Spain and along the Riviera and are going on to London before returning here early in July. Mrs. Fish has arranged to entertain some of her friends at her Newport place during the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bacon will give a big dinner on Saturday night at their country place at Westbury, L. I., which will be their last party before they go to Paris.

William Rhineland Stewart has gone to Bar Harbor with his son, W. B. Stewart, Jr. He will exchange visits with his brother, Lisenard Stewart, now at White Lodge, his Newport place. Miss Anita Stewart, his daughter, who was recently presented at court, is participating in the gayeties of the season at London, where her mother, Mrs. James Henry Smith, has a house. It is quite near that of Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, and Miss Margaretta Drexel and Miss Stewart go about together. The two Philadelphia heiresses married during the last week, who were the Misses Mary Astor Paul and Frances Fell, are cousins of Miss Drexel.

It will be somewhat late in July before Miss Leahy leaves her residence, 1032 Fifth avenue, for her Newport cottage. Among her expected house guests for the late summer are Constance Duchess of Manchester and Mrs. Betty Green, who have been future cottage guests at her resort. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, have taken one of the Pinard cottages.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Orme Wilson are due to arrive in Europe next Tuesday. They have their sons, the Messrs. Orme Wilson, Jr., and Thornton Wilson, with them.
